Archaeologists have recently found probable images of UFO drawn on the walls from ancient times.

Unidentified flying objects (UFOs) were photographed in the 1940s. However, archaeologists have found probable images of UFOs drawn in ancient times between the start of recorded human history and the early Middle Ages.

Circular shapes of floating objects and similar figures to the American science fiction film, "The Extra Terrestrial" (E.T) have been found in ancient remains in Egypt and Uzbekistan.

Based on the evidence, archaeologists claim people in the Middle Ages knew of the existence of aliens and treated them as gods with absolute power.

The belief of alien's existence in the Middle Ages is promoted by Swiss author, Erich von Daniken. He wrote a book, "Chariots of the gods" which mainly deals with aliens landing on the Earth in the past and changing the path of human evolution by manipulating the genes of genetic engineering.

"Artifacts have been found and they represent a higher technological knowledge than existed at a time when they were manufactured," Daniken says.

Previously, additional similar remains of extraterrestrial were found in Turkey and China. Russian archaeologists continued to find more evidence. They reported that they discovered alien graves from 500 years ago.

The experts added that the bodies were 2 meters long and had oval-shaped heads. Even though additional alien graves were found, scientists could not find the remains of any aircraft; therefore, mysteries of UFOs existence continue.
