

EXPRESS

Eyewitness 'blown away' by object conspiracy theorists claim is 'alien craft'

UFO HUNTERS have excitedly shared extraordinary images of the recovery of an apparent alien craft close to Area 51.

By Tom Fish

06:12, Tue, Sep 8, 2020 Updated: 09:22, Mon, Sep 14, 2020

A UFO has supposedly been spotted being loaded onto a lorry, according to claims made by an alien conspiracy theorist. The amateur smartphone videos purport to show an odd anomaly being loaded onto the back of a large goods vehicle at an undisclosed location in the US. The minute-long montage shows a large disk-shaped anomaly strapped to the back of a lorry.

However, due to the grainy nature of the video footage, it is difficult to conclusively confirm what the orange object is.

But alien life conspiracy theorist Scott Waring took to his UFO Sightings Daily blog to speculate about his latest dubious discovery.

Waring said: "Here is an interesting video of a trailer and truck having a bit of a problem with a UFO sliding a bit too far and getting off balance."

UFO sighting: A UFO has supposedly been spotted being loaded onto a lorry (Image: UFO Sightings Daily)

UFO sighting: The amateur smartphone photos purport to show an odd anomaly near to Area 51 (Image: Express)

Waring adds the eyewitness was allegedly 'blown away' by what they saw.

He then proceeds to suggest the object is extraterrestrial in origin.

Waring writes: "Now, UFOs have been transported like this before.

"Why? Because lack of military trucks and police vehicles causes less alarm and draws less attention.

"This is especially if they only have to take the craft short distances.

UFO sighting: The minute-long montage shows a large disk-shaped anomaly strapped to the back of a lorry (Image: UFO Sightings Daily)

“Why not fly it you ask? If it is a new disk given to the US military from aliens in trade for items, then who is going to know how to pilot it?

“No one - thus moving it to a secure location for pilot testing is important.

“This is 100 percent alien or it would not need to be transported anywhere.”

Waring adds, without offering any evidence, the anomaly will be taken to alleged UFO hotspot Area 51.

He said: “Maybe traded for, maybe a UFO crash in the area, whatever the case, we know this is headed to a military base, probably Area 51.”

However, the ‘unidentified flying object’ is likely in reality simply a collapsed tent or awning.

Experts describe this is an example of pareidolia, the phenomenon of recognising objects or patterns in unrelated objects.

Pareidolia is a form of apophenia, a general term for the human tendency to seek patterns in random information.